FOREWORD

THERE has been a tremendous onslaught on Oriental Rugs of late. The citadel of price and quality has been besieged—time honored names, century old reputations have been subjected to a severe attack. Today, the public is bewildered and is losing confidence in the stability of Oriental Rugs, and in what they have stood for all these years, so much so, that a prospective rug buyer told me the other day she did not want to buy an Oriental Rug; she wanted to purchase a Persian Rug!

The specimens here offered for sale are the kind that will appeal to people who love rugs for what they mean to them in art and sentiment.

It has taken me a quarter of a century to bring these rugs together. Under the terms and conditions they are placed on sale, the architects and the decorators, as well as the public in general will now enjoy the double advantage of quality and low prices.
